JOURNAL OF HUMANISTIC PSYCHOLOGY

Published in cooperation with the Association for Humanistic Psychology

Editor: Thomas Greening, Saybrook Graduate School and Research Center, San Francisco, California

Explore the many facets of humanistic psychology ("the third force") in the most influential and respected international publication in the field—the Journal of Humanistic Psychology. Founded by Abraham Maslow and Anthony Sutich in 1961, the Journal of Humanistic Psychology provides a readable and comprehensive overview of humanistic psychology, broadly and critically considered, with articles on a variety of topics such as:

- Authenticity
- Community-building
- Confluent education
- Consciousness
- Creativity
- Existential-humanistic psychotherapy
- Holistic healing and learning
- Humanistic politics
- Human science research
- Identity
- I-Thou encounters
- Love
- Patients' rights and empowerment
- Peace and mediation
- Personal growth
- Person-centered counselling
- Self-actualization and self-transcendence
- Spiritual development
- Synergy
- Values

In addition to bringing you a variety of experiential reports, theoretical papers, personal essays, poems, and research studies emphasizing human science methods and analyses of contemporary culture, Journal of Humanistic Psychology also supplements its coverage with in-depth studies of topics of particular interest, including special issues on:

- Existential-Humanistic Psychotherapy
- Positive Psychology
- International Development in Humanistic Psychology
- Ecopsychology
- Peace and Citizen Diplomacy
- Trauma and Transcendence
- James Bugental
- Rollo May
- Carl Rogers

CUMULATIVE INDEX: The Journal of Humanistic Psychology's Fall 2000 issue (Vol.40, n.4) is an index of all articles in JHP's first 40 years by title, author and subject. It is an invaluable resource for scholars, teachers, therapists, and general readers.
